

GOOD SAMARITAN DAY

NOVEMBER 2018

'The Good Samaritan' by Stephen Sawyer.

An international Good Samaritan Day was created in order to honour Good Samaritans, promote the acquisition and maintenance of first aid skills, and further the introduction Good Samaritan laws worldwide, and in so doing help create strong communities where people help each other.

We believe the right attitude is summed up by our slogan: "Do small things with great love."

Good Samaritan Day was founded by Richard Lutz as a result of seeing the video from a security camera of an incident in China on October 13th, 2011, in which a young girl named Wang Yue was run over by two vehicles in a market street in Foshan, Guangdong province, and ignored by 18 passersby until an elderly woman named Chen Xianmei, a recycler, came to her aid as she lay motionless on the road.

The little girl, known as "Yue Yue", had wandered away from her home while her mother, Qu Feifei, had rushed outside to collect washing during a thunderstorm. Ms Qu arrived on the scene soon after Ms Chen stopped to help. Yue Yue died of her injuries eight days later.

First Aid Training

The Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies provide first aid training and sell a wide range of first aid kits.

Emergency Kit

1. A small first aid kit available from the Red Cross and Red Crescent (add six Jelly Babies for diabetics).
2. A rescue tool like the Spyderco Assist is ideal for quickly and safely cutting seat belts, rope and clothing. It also has a tungsten carbide glass breaker for breaking car windows and an emergency whistle built into the handle.
3. A small AA battery powered flashlight with an SOS flasher function like the Fenix LD12 is ideal for emergency use.
4. A smartphone with Google Maps helps you direct emergency services to your location or find a nearby hospital.
5. A road map helps you direct emergency services to your location or find a nearby hospital.
